

New York. 10029.

MAY 23, 1987.

DEAR Mirriam,

Thank you for your letter, I gave it to your father, he didn't say anything but somehow I think it did something to him. He is more determined than ever to put together this exhibition out of which we expect to raise enough money to do many of the things important to him. He wants very badly to get you here so that you can finish your education. He also wants just to see you all to spend time with you. The pictures you sent he liked very much, you look so much like him, I think you may possess some of his personality and spunk. I very much want to surprise him one of these days by having you visit. Therefore you must apply for a passport and prepare yourself so that when I give the go ahead you would be in a position to come. It would help for you to give me a schedule of when you would be finishing school when you would have holidays so that I might keep that in mind when planning things.

I will also try to get a list of addresses you and your sister may write to for scholarships. As you know regardless of whether you get those scholarships or not our plans to get you here eventually and soon remain in effect. I also look forward to seeing you one of these days & I know you need to spend time with your father because he is a brilliant and